Subject: Support responsible solar energy development

Dear Solar Energy PEIS Scoping,

I fully support the Bureau of Land Management and Department of Energy in creating a program for the development of solar energy. The western states provide great potential for cultivating renewable resources on public lands, and solar energy production will help reduce the degradation to our valued landscapes that is resulting from global climate change. However, the significant and long-lasting impacts of concentrating solar power plants require a hard look at potential sites to find the places where the footprint has the least impact.

The PEIS is a great opportunity for the BLM and the DOE to make sure solar energy is done right in the West. The same landscapes that make utility-scale solar energy possible are often the ones that are most at risk from the impacts of climate change and in need of protection. To ensure preservation of our wild lands, the scope of the PEIS should include the following:

- * Prioritize projects on already-degraded lands.
- * Areas where solar development is not permitted should be identified in the BLM plans and be included in the DOE's policies. In addition, the agencies should come up with a more complete list of important and sensitive lands to be protected, including, but not limited to: other identified conservation lands, such as national parks, national monuments, state parks; citizen-proposed wilderness; areas already proposed for protection from development in pending legislation; wildlife migration corridors and critical habitat; and areas with known concentrations of cultural resources.
- * Establish mandatory best management practices and development stipulations.
- * Explore mitigation measures for environmental impacts, including cumulative impacts and detailed habitat fragmentation analysis.
- * Establish a policy for incorporating site-specific projects with existing transmission and transmission corridors.

Furthermore, the BLM should make it a top priority to approve non-controversial solar projects that have already been proposed and continue accepting and processing solar applications in non-controversial areas on a case-by-case basis during the PEIS process.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Solar Energy Development PEIS.

Sincerely,
