Solar Energy PEIS Scoping
 Argonne National Laboratory
 9700 S. Cass Avenue, EVS/900
 Argonne, IL 60439

To Whom It May Concern,

Please find attached an Excel file containing 2243 comments from Defenders of Wildlife supporters in Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah regarding the Bureau of Land Management's Solar Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement scoping process.

Many of our supporters personalized their comments, and those comments appear first in the file. However, all of our supporters submitted or customized some version of the comments below:

I am writing to urge the Bureau of Land Management to develop strong environmental guidelines for utility-scale solar energy development in Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Nevada and Utah that will ensure that our wildlife and wild lands are protected for future generations.

Americans recognize that our energy needs are growing -- and that our future depends on finding sustainable ways to meet those needs, free ourselves from dependence on foreign energy suppliers, and reduce our reliance on energy sources that contribute to global warming.

But it's important that we protect the natural value of our southwestern lands and the wildlife that lives there as we pursue renewable energy development.

A single solar energy plant can cover thousands of acres and must be built on land with less than a 3% grade and completely bare of plants and animals. When land is graded, all living things are either displaced or destroyed. That's why it's so important to choose site locations wisely.

Our Southwest deserts are fragile ecosystems that provide vital habitat for wildlife, including species -- like the desert tortoise -- that are currently protected under the Endangered Species Act. Large, interconnected intact habitats are vital to preserving the rich biodiversity of our deserts.

Decisions about where to build solar energy facilities and how to transmit the electricity we need to power our cities will affect more than a million acres of land -- and the imperiled wildlife that depends on these lands to survive.

I strongly support the Bureau's current policy to protect certain public lands from solar development. I also encourage you to expand these "off limits" areas to include designated habitat for federally protected species, key wildlife migration corridors, State Parks and state-designated wilderness areas, Important Bird Areas, and all Areas of Critical Environmental Concern.

Southwest deserts are already under considerable pressure because of off-highway vehicle use, development, pollution, and water shortages. The Bureau should take into account how solar development projects, and, in particular, multiple projects, could compound these existing problems if they are not developed in the most sustainable manner possible.

Specifically, I urge the Bureau to incorporate landscape-level and cumulative analysis into its application review process. Proposed development sites do not exist in isolation. In an effort to monitor the overall health of our sensitive desert ecosystems, the Bureau should consider existing and foreseeable projects and environmental problems when reviewing all applications.

I support renewable energy and think that solar energy can move forward. But with our energy needs so high and so many solar projects in the queue, we need strong policies in place to minimize negative environmental impacts and protect our public lands and wildlife for future generations.

With careful planning, our energy future -- and the future of our wildlife -- will both be more secure.

Thank you for considering my views on this incredibly important topic.

Finally, please accept our thanks to you and the Bureau staff for ensuring that the voices of these concerned citizens are heard.

Sincerely,

Leslie Trew Magraw
