I understand the need for alternative energy sources. But it seems odd to me, public lands closed for the sake of solar pannels?
There is sun all over the south west. I am sure a suitable alternative location could be found without closing public land. 6000 acers of pannels seems excessive for one location. Take a look at the solar pannel farm in Barstow CA. It is very large but hardly 6000 acers. Tell us how that is working out for them. Please keep our public land open so myself family and friends can enjoy it.
Thank you
